

MBTI® Certified Leadership Development Consultant Learns There's More to Assessment Than Just Four Letters

“Although we have a tendency to look at the four letters the MBTI tool gives you, there’s actually a lot more involved in understanding the different facets of the personalities and how that plays out.”

ELAINE-MARIE BOHEN
LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT CONSULTANT

Why did you want to get certified to use the MBTI assessment?

I’ve used it over the years, I’ve been exposed to it as a participant, and I found it really valuable to get greater awareness of myself, my personality preferences, and how that helps me interact more effectively with others.

What was the most interesting thing you learned during the four-day certification program?

I learned that personalities are really multidimensional and that although we have a tendency to look at the four letters that the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® tool gives you, there’s actually a lot more involved in understanding the different facets of the personalities and how that plays out.

Would you recommend the MBTI® Certification Program to a colleague?

I would definitely recommend colleagues and friends go through the certification process. It’s such an enriching experience to hear from both subject matter experts and the facilitators that take you through the process. They’re really great. You also get to learn a lot about yourself and others from the people you interact with in the group, and it’s a great networking experience as well.

Be better at what you do

By successfully completing the MBTI® Certification Program, you’ll enrich yourself and discover new ways to help your clients and improve your practice. At this highly interactive, comprehensive four-day workshop, you’ll:
